The Report on Incentives for Aid Effectiveness in Donor Agencies was prepared by the Joint Venture on Managing for Development Results, chaired by Joan Boer (Permanent Representative of the Netherlands to the OECD) and Bruce Purdue (Asian Development Bank), under the auspices of the Development Assistance Committee (DAC) Working Party on Aid Effectiveness, an international partnership hosted by the DAC.

The Report draws on previous work of the OECD-DAC Working Party on Aid Effectiveness, on studies by the Overseas Development Institute (ODI) and on extensive interviews undertaken by PricewaterhouseCoopers (PwC) with headquarter and field staff from a core group of ten donor agencies: Agence Française de Développement, Asian Development Bank, Canadian International Development Agency, Millennium Challenge Corporation (United States), Netherlands Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Swedish International Development Co-operation Agency, UK Department for International Development, United States Department of State (Office of the Director of Foreign Assistance), United States Agency for International Development, and the World Bank. All the members of the OECD-DAC Joint Venture on Managing for Development Results were consulted in the process of developing this report.

Thank you to Stefan Schmitz, Senior Policy Analyst in the Aid Effectiveness Division of the Development Co-operation Directorate at the OECD and to his colleague Shayne MacLachlan for their work in editing, formatting and making ready this paper for publication.
